

Information Matters™

Providing specialist support to maintain and exploit your information resources

Tribal in Energy

In a rapidly changing world, Tribal is committed to making information easy to locate and readily available to the staff who need it. To achieve this we draw upon a wide range of information management skills and services, including consulting, outsourcing, business transformation, records management and technology delivery.

Tribal offers:

- Data management support staff
- Information management consultants
- Business management consultants
- Document control and EDMS specialists
- Technical software solutions
- Outsourced technical library solutions.

Through our independent and experienced practitioners we offer an unparalleled range and depth of specialist skills. Our practitioners are individually selected for their specific capabilities and experience to support the global energy market.

We have provided strategic and operational consultancy services to:

- National utilities
- Exploration and production companies
- Service companies
- Engineering companies
- Government regulators
- National Data Centres.

Our domain experts provide a wide range of support services to both upstream and downstream activities. They undertake specific technical, commercial and managerial programmes; and are used to supplement existing in-house teams with specific and often scarce resources.

Through the deployment of technology, and software solutions we have improved efficiency, control and governance which has had a major impact on day-to-day operation.

Clients who partner with Tribal benefit by improved management of information, policies and procedures which add value, reduce risk and deliver real business benefits.
